NATHAN B. EDDY MEMORIAL AWARD

Maxine Stitzer, Ph.D.
Professor of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences,
Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine

Dr. Stitzer received her Ph.D. in Psychology from the University of Michigan under mentorship of James H. Woods. She subsequently became a founding faculty member of the Behavioral Pharmacology Research Unit at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, a nationally recognized substance abuse research laboratory within the Department of Psychiatry. Her interests during a successful 40+ year NIDA-supported research career focused on both pharmacological and behavioral approaches to the treatment of substance use disorders including opioid, stimulant and tobacco use disorders. She is best known for her pioneering work on Contingency Management in substance abuse treatment, an approach designed to enhance motivation for positive behavior change. She provided leadership at Hopkins from 1999 – 2019 of the Mid-Atlantic Node of the National Institute on Drug Abuse Clinical Trials Network (CTN). She has been an active member of CPDD throughout her career and served on the CPDD Board of Directors from 1993 – 97 and from 2006 -10. She received the Marian Fischman Award from the College in 2003. Her research overall has advanced the understanding of substance use disorders and promoted adoption of evidence-based treatments into clinical practice.

INNOVATOR AWARD

Bertha K. Madras, Ph.D.

Professor of Psychobiology, Harvard Medical School

Bertha Madras, PhD, is Professor of Psychobiology, Harvard Medical School (HMS, 32 years), and directs the Lab of Addiction Neurobiology at McLean Hospital. Her laboratory discovered key targets of drugs in primate brain, developed novel imaging agents and identified naturalistic primate models of human-based genetic disorders. With collaborators, she received 19 U.S. and 27 international patents. She is editor of several text books, developed the first addictions course (elective) for HMS students (1991), created the Cell Biology of Addictions Course at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory, and a Museum exhibit, CD (licensed by Disney), “Changing your mind: Drugs in the Brain”, with the Museum of Science, Boston. As Deputy Director for Demand Reduction in the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, Executive Office of President (a presidential appointment unanimously confirmed by the U.S. Senate), she catalyzed Screening, Brief Intervention, Referral to Treatment (SBIRT) services nationally. In 2017, she served on President Trump’s 6-member Commission on Combating Drug Addiction and the Opioid Crisis, and marshalled the final Commission report. The World Health Organization commissioned her to write “Update of Cannabis and its Medical Use” and she served as a panelist for the Vatican Pontifical Academy of Sciences assembly: “Narcotics: Problems and Solutions of this Global Issue”. She received an NIH MERIT award, NIDA Public Service Award, American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry Founders’ Award, others. The Better World Report (2006) cited her brain imaging invention as “one of 25 technology transfer (university to industry) innovations that changed the world”.

MENTORSHIP AWARD

Linda Cottler Ph.D.
Associate Dean, University of Florida

Dr. Linda B. Cottler is Associate Dean for Research at the College of Public Health and Health Professions and Dean's Professor of Epidemiology at the University of Florida. Before joining UF in 2011, Cottler spent 30 years at Washington University in St. Louis, where she earned her PhD with mentor and Eddy-award winner Dr. Lee Robins, then rose to the rank of Professor. Cottler has been funded by NIDA since 1989, and her research, focused on underrepresented populations, includes development of culturally reliable and valid measures for identifying substance use disorders, psychiatric disorders and their risk factors; innovative methods for conducting national surveys of high-risk behaviors; and peer-delivered interventions. Her work has been international in scope, reaching Australia, Taiwan, India, Kenya, Afghanistan, Haiti, and Thailand. Cottler's community focus includes her HealthStreet model, a hub for linking community residents to social and medical referrals, health messages, and research opportunities. She is PI of the NIDA T32, UF Substance Abuse Training Center in Public Health, and PI of a Fogarty International Center Training Program partnering with the National Institute of Mental Health and Neurosciences in Bangalore, India beginning in 2001. She has directly mentored more than 100 pre-and post-doctoral fellows, K awardees and junior faculty who are now themselves making important contributions to research. Dr. Cottler's first CPDD meeting was in 1983. She has served on numerous committees, been elected to the Board of Directors in 1994 and 2010, and served as Treasurer from 2014 to 2017. In 2010 she was the proud recipient of the Marian Fischman Award.

JOSEPH COCHIN
YOUNG INVESTIGATOR AWARD

Stephen J. Kohut, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Psychiatry
McLean Hospital - Harvard Medical School

Dr. Kohut received a B.A. in Psychology from LaSalle University and a Ph.D. in Behavior, Cognition, and Neuroscience from American University under the direction of Dr. Anthony Riley. Following postdoctoral training with Dr. Jonathan Katz in the Medications Discovery Research Branch at the National Institute on Drug Abuse Intramural Research Program, he accepted a faculty position within the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Research Center at McLean Hospital/Harvard Medical School in 2011. He is currently an Assistant Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and Director, Behavioral Neuroimaging Laboratory at McLean Hospital. Dr. Kohut's research program, funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, combines behavioral pharmacology techniques with cutting-edge neuroimaging methodologies in nonhuman primates to understand the neural consequences of drug-taking behavior and the extent to which they can be mitigated by behavioral and pharmacological interventions. He also has a long-standing interest in elucidating the role of monoamines, particularly serotonin and norepinephrine, in the behavioral effects of drugs of abuse, and using this information to develop novel monoaminergic compounds as candidate medications for drug abuse and addiction. He has served on the Animals in Research Committee (2012-2016) and Program Committee (2017 - present) and has regularly attended annual meetings to present his research since joining the College in 2006.

CPDD/NIDA MEDIA AWARD

Elaine McMillon Sheldon,
Charleston, West Virginia

Elaine McMillon Sheldon is an Academy Award-nominated documentary filmmaker who explores stories of identity, roots, survival, resilience, and hope. Sheldon is the director of "Heroin(e)" a Netflix Original Short Documentary that follows three women fighting the opioid crisis in West Virginia. "Heroin(e)" was nominated for a 2018 Academy Award, and a 2018 News & Documentary Emmy. Her debut feature documentary, "Recovery Boys," which documents the lives of four men working to transform their lives after years of addiction, is also a Netflix Original and premiered at the 2018 Hot Docs Film Festival. Sheldon received a 2013 Peabody award, 2014 Emmy nomination and 3rd Prize in the World Press Photo Multimedia Awards for her interactive documentary "Hollow," which explored post-industrial America. Sheldon was named one of the "25 New Faces of Independent Film" by Filmmaker Magazine and is a 2018 USA Fellow by United States Artists.

MARTIN & TOBY ADLER DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

Charles O'Keeffe, Ph.D.
VCU School of Medicine

Charles O'Keeffe is a professor, in the Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology and the Institute on Drug and Alcohol Dependence at Virginia Commonwealth University where, upon arrival he collaborated with the Universities of Adelaide and King's College, London to establish the International Programme in Addiction Studies, which awards a Masters in Addiction Studies from the combined universities to students from around the world. Additionally, he was instrumental in bringing the Hubert Humphrey Fellowship Program to the University. Prior to joining VCU, he served as president and CEO of Reckitt-Benckiser Pharmaceuticals as the company and NIDA worked under a Cooperative Research and Development Agreement to develop buprenorphine products for the treatment of addiction, and he worked closely with the Congress as it came to agreement on the Drug Addiction Treatment Act, which for the first time in nearly a century allowed physicians to treat OUD patients in the privacy of the physician's office. Prior to joining the company, he had served as Deputy Director for International Affairs in the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy and as Special Assistant to the President for International Health where he worked with the US Senate to support ratification of the UN Convention on Psychotropic Substances. Earlier in his career he ran the largest clinical toxicology laboratory in the country providing urine toxicology services to the Department of Defense for troops returning home from Vietnam. He also developed the first abuse-resistant, child-resistant dosage form for dispensing methadone for take-home patients. He serves on Boards of Directors for several non-profit organizations as well as pharmaceutical companies. He was one of the founders of the Friends of the NIDA.
